PRESENTATION

(Excerpts from each film will be shown)

Two recent Hollywood movies, “The Chef” and “Boyhood”, have depicted the circumstance of separated fathers and their relationship to their sons. The time frame in the films is contemporary, post 2000, with “Boyhood” distinctively filmed over a period of 12 years, from 2001 through 2013.

Film through photography, story, and dialogue, has the powerful capacity to portray a specific historical and cultural time period which, following E.H.Erickson, (1959, 1976), is crucially important to the formation and evolution of “ego identity”. One’s sense of “masculinity” and “femininity” are a central part of an individual’s identity and are subject to the prevailing and often changing cultural viewpoints during the time of the person’s development.

Film draws us into an absorption, somewhere between our ordinary conscious perception of the world and day dreaming, where fantasy exerts a particularly strong pull. Our sense of reality becomes suspended as we immerse ourselves both in the story, feelings and moods portrayed, as well as identifying with one character or another all of which stirs fantasies within us. Based upon these two films this presentation will consider the following issues: the challenge the father’s absence from the home presents to the father-son relationship; differing views of masculinity post-2000; the critical issues and tasks fathers and sons must navigate as a boy passes from childhood, through early and late adolescence, into early adulthood. Also considered will be the concept of ‘Father-Hunger’, particularly evident in “The Chef”, and the importance of a father’s openness and willingness to set limits as critical factors in promoting the boy’s development and autonomy. While not prominent (a statement in itself), suggestions of Oedipal themes and resolutions will be considered in light of Greenberg’s (1991) thoughts about a “New Oedipus Complex”.

PRESENTER:

Richard Steinberg, Ph.D.

Dr. Steinberg is a twice Past-President of the SEFAPP Board of Directors, a Founding Member of SEFAPP, and Acting President of the SEFAPP Board since 2013. He was Co-Director of the “Veterans Project of South Florida” (2008-2012), a joint project with the Florida Psychoanalytic Society. He originated “SEFAPP at the Movies” and has presented on the movies “Last Tango in Paris” - What is this thing called Love? , “The House of Sand and Fog”-How Free are We? and moderated numerous film presentations. He has been a discussant on case presentations at APA Division 39, SEFAPP, and has been a Supervisor and Faculty Member at SEFAPP. Other areas of interest are Clinical Process and Clinical Theory and Technique, which he has taught at SEFAPP. He is currently completing his Psychoanalytic Training at the Institute for Psychoanalytic Training and Research in New York City and has a private practice in Boca Raton, Florida.

OBJECTIVES After attending this program in its entirety, participants will be able to:

- Discuss two ways the cultural view of “masculinity” changed since the 1950’s.
- Assess the role of the father in transmitting “masculinity” to his son and the challenges for the separated father and son.
- Describe the concepts of “Ego Identity”, “Father Hunger”, and “New Oedipus Complex”.
